Scenario 1

A social worker from a fostering agency was in a multi-agency meeting regarding a 17-year-old of Black Caribbean heritage for whom professionals had mental health concerns. Others present were a police officer; YOT worker and foster carer and AMHP. When asked for an opinion about possible outcomes of an assessment the AMHP explained the need to find an age-appropriate bed if an application was made for detention. The SW from the fostering agency said: “Is that necessary for someone like him? Have you seen the size of him, he’s like a Silver Back. He’s one of these lot who have been moving packs since age 13, he’s more of an adult than many on the adult wards”.

Scenario 2

A consultant psychiatrist was in a conversation with an AMHP about her recommendation for detention for a 25 year old young woman from an Irish Traveller family. She said “It’s hard these ones, professionally I have to recommend admission because the risks are too high. It’s always the kids and young people I feel for, you can see this life they’ve been born into isn’t doing them any good.”

Scenario 3

During an assessment of a Pakistani Muslim young man the family described that the young man “.....began acting strange, going out with White girls and drinking” During the discussion amongst the mental health professionals one of the doctors said “I’ve dealt with these families before. They are known to blow things up (he then winked) out of proportion”.

Scenario 4

An Iranian asylum seeker who’s claim had been rejected by the Home Office had been arrested for assault on a member of the public who had pulled him back to safety from an attempted jump from a multistorey car park, in distress about his unsuccessful application. The forensic medical examiner at the police station recommended a mental health act assessment. In conversation with the AMHP prior to transfer to the Place of Safety the FME said “I actually genuinely think he is suicidal; the problem is, we don’t make the rules. You can treat him but as he’s illegal here his problem isn’t going away?”
